A CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.

JOHN A. SHAEFFER, of Philadelphia, who has for a few years past been in the southern States, has had the effrontery to draw several Bills of Exchange on Timothy Pickering, Esq. To prevent further imposition, I have to request the printers of Newspapers in the United States to publish this for the benefit of their fellow-citizens. SAMUEL MEREDITH,

CONSTANTINOPLE, August 10.

Revolutionary Commotions.

A great fermentation still reigns in this capital, and the police will be forced to redouble its vigilance in order to hinder the people from committing violence upon the French who are here. However the government still continues to act with moderation and caution towards them. Every one interprets this conduct according to his own wishes or opinion. Some see in it a secret intelligence with the French, others believe it to be only an act of circumspection, which agrees with the secrecy of the military operations that are preparing. If any thing can solve this species of problem, it is the orders issued by the Porte to all the provinces of the Empire. The preamble is conceived in terms of the most marked indignation; the proceedings of the French is there represented as the most unjust act of aggression and highly contrary to the faith of treaties. These orders perscribe measures offensive and hostile.

The English Minister appears to have much influenced these determinations, and his active zeal neglects nothing that can tend to strengthen the energy of government. The Russian Ambassador does not appear to shew less activity in his negociations; but we do not remark a concert in the operations of the two Ministers, and if they tend to the same end, the means they pursue are widely different.

Buonaparte has addressed a letter to the Divan, in which he says, that if the Ottoman Porte should permit the Russian fleet to pass the Dardanelles, he shall consider it as a declaration of war.

He requires the Grand Signior to put aside all the pretensions of Russia; to oppose firmly all attempts which that Court might make; and adds, that he has the greatest reason to expect such a line of conduct from him, as he has delivered him from his greatest enemies, the Knights of Malta.

The Porte received on the 31st ult. the confirmation of Buonaparte's debarkation at Alexandria. Possessing that city, with little resistance, he immediately proceeded against Rosetta, the garrison of which being few in number, fled at his approach He immediately afterwards directed his march to Grand Cairo. We are not acquainted with what has since passed, but it appears certain that the Beys, forgetful of their personal animosities, have united closely, and have collected a considerable number of troops, which has been much increased by the Arabs. This army stationed itself at about twenty leagues from Rosetta, between that town and Cairo, with a view to dispute the passage. It is further added, that the Pacha of Palestine has also succeeded in collecting a large body of men, at the head of which he was to have marched against Alexandria.

The many incoherent reports in circulation afford reason for sticking entirely to the official accounts received by the Porte from Damietta, dated July 18, which say, that the French were entrenched in the environs of Rosetta, ten leagues from Alexandria, and in sight of the army of the Beys, which was only the distance of half a league from the French camp.

Official letters from the Canea, (in the island of Candia) dated July 18, mention the appearance of an English squadron before that island. The Commander of it, after having enquired concerning the course of the French fleet, determined to sail directly for Egypt.

A letter from Smyrna, of the 1st of August, mentions that the same squadron was met with beyond Rhodes, with a fair wind for Egypt.

The Porte, it is confirmed has made advantageous offers of peace to Passowa Oglu, and proposed to make him Pacha of Servia, which last honor, however, he has declined, and says, he only wishes to remain as a private Janissary, whose rights, &c. he had so long defended.

SEMLIN, August 25.

Turkish Rebellion.

The army of the captain Pacha is almost entirely deserted, and he has gone to Constantinople. The greatest part of the Ottoman troops have entered the army of Passawan Oglou, or rather, ranged themselves on the side of the Janisaries; for, it is well knows, that it was on account of the latter that the war broke out between the grand Turk and Passawan Oglou; because an attempt was made to subject them to the discipline of the other military corps. The greatest part of the Divan secretly favor the Rebels; and almost all the Pachas sent against Passawan Oglou have joined him, and openly declared themselves the enemies of the sublime Porte.

BERNE, August 26.

The troubles which have broken out in the Cantons of Schwitz and Utterwallen, are more serious than was at first supposed, and appear to have been excited by foreign influence.

The people have again declared their opposition to the constitution. They have demanded their former liberty, insulted the constituted authorities, held assemblies of the communes ordered barricades, entrenchments, &c. &c. Order is however re-established in the canton of Schwitz. The Directory, of which the actual President is Leharpe, has addressed a proclamation to the citizens of the canton of Wakleſtalt, in which their crimes are pointed out, and an invitation given to return to their duty.

ARAU, August 28.

All the letters which we received from Zurich, and the country of the Grisons, announce, that the Austrians have possessed themselves of Coire; and, that a battle had been fought between them and the French Troops. Our frontiers are threatened by the imperial troops, which are assembled there to the number of thirty battalions and ten squadrons. Austria thus breaks all the treaties which she has with us. The goods and effects of which we unfortunately have too great a quantity in the Austrian States are seized.

The troops commanded by General Shauemburg, are all in movement towards the menaced point.

STRASBOURG, Sep. 3.

The count de Metternich, yesterday delivered to the deputation of the empire, the last note of the French ministers, which was taken into consideration by the deputation. It is not yet decided whether the latter will accede to the propositions of the French legation; however, it is seen that several envoys of the empire, fearing that an absolute refusal would only bring on the dissolution of the Congress and the re-commencement of hostilities, are using their utmost efforts to obtain the consent of the deputation; but the Austrian ministers redouble their intrigues to get it rejected. We wait with much anxiety the answer of the deputation, which will probably, decide the question of peace or war.

BERLIN, Aug. 28.

Our cabinet has just received disagreeable intelligence. Symptoms of a conspiracy have appeared in Poland. Men, who are thought best informed upon this subject, say that nothing is wanted to hasten this dreaded explosion but an happy event in the Mediterranean.

Latest from England.

The ship Cumberland, capt. Scott, arrived at Portland, from Liverpool, via Dublin, has brought the following News:

Further, and the latest, un-official accounts of the Mediterranean fleets.

LONDON, Sept. 21.

We yesterday stopped the press to announce a communication which had been made by the Telegraph to the admiralty, of French papers having been received at Dover, and one of them containing an account of the defeat of the French fleet in the Mediterranean by sir Horatio Nelson. This communication of course excited a most lively interest and anxiety. In the evening the French papers reached town, and the articles above alluded to we found in a supplement to the Redacteur of the 14th, in the following terms:

"Letters from Malta inform, that Buonaparte had landed on the first of July, with the whole of his army, at Alexandria, that after having entered into a treaty of amity with the chiefs of the Arabs, he directed his march along the Nile to Grand Cairo, which he entered on the 23d July, at the head of the French army, and that having rendered himself master of Lower Egypt he was continuing his march.—The same letters inform us, that the squadron of admiral Brueys had anchored on the coast of Bignieres, and was preparing to return to France when it was attacked by the English squadron, which was superior to ours, both in the number and the size of the vessels; that on both sides the action was maintained with a degree of obstinacy, of which history affords no example; that during the action the vessel of the French admiral was burnt; that two or three French ships sunk; and that some others, both English and French, ran aground, after having lost all their masts; and that, finally, some other French ships, quite disabled, remained on the spot where the battle was fought. We are much alarmed about their fate."

London, September 20.

Sun Office, half past one, P. M.

We stop the press to announce, that we learn from undoubted authority, that by the admiralty Telegraph intelligence has just been conveyed, of a French paper of the 15th having been this forenoon landed at Dover, containing the very gratifying information of an action having taken place between admiral Nelson and the French fleet, in which the British was happily victorious.

The various accounts which have been received respecting the operations of the French army under Buonaparte, have much contributed to perplex the public opinion. That of Saturday, by the Hamburg mail, of the French having sustained a very considerable defeat, seemed to be contradicted and overthrown by the account received by the East India Company, from their agent at Constantinople; while on the other hand the statements by the mail which arrived on Monday, seemed to confirm those brought by the former. We have been at great pains to trace these various accounts, to compare and to digest them; and we think we can say with a considerable degree of confidence; that the company's agent must have adopted vague and hasty reports, while the intelligence by the mails was founded on more authentic information. By letters from Constantinople, of as recent a date as those received by the overland dispatch, and which amount in fact to official authority, it seems certain that Buonaparte had received a very considerable defeat near Rosetta, in consequence of which he was obliged to encamp and entrench himself. In this situation he could neither advance nor retreat, while the Arabs were collecting in immense numbers with the determination to attack and overwhelm him. From a view of the map, and after a temperate consideration of all circumstances, we are strengthened in our opinion that the accounts of Buonaparte having possessed himself of Grand Cairo, must be unfounded. It is a march of about 120 or 130 miles through a country presenting innumerable difficulties to any army, and more particularly when that army must be harrassed and beset by such superior numbers.

September 18.

The Cisalpine and Roman Republicks are the scenes of much agitation. The former is rent by contending parties, the latter convulsed by insurrection.

A mail arrived this day from Dublin, but, happy for Ireland—happy for Britain! order and quiet are now so generally restored, that hardly any other fact is left to us to communicate in the way of intelligence.

A French paper says "all communication between the English and Spanish is now prohibited at Cadiz. Three hundred sheep, destined for the English fleet were lately confiscated.

A ship from Baltimore for Martinico has been taken by a privateer, retaken by the Santa Margaretta frigate, and sent into Antigua.

FRANKFORT (Ger.) Sept. 4.

Most of the French generals have left Friedberg for their respective commands, except the commander in chief Joubert, and his staff. French troops arrive daily, and six regiments of horse were daily expected there.

The Landgrave of Hesse Cassel has ordered all the frontier places of the country of Hanau to be occupied with troops, to secure its neutrality.

DUBLIN, September 25.

By a second communication made thro' the admiralty Telegraph at London late on Thursday evening, the detail of admiral Nelson's victory has been in a good measure notified; it was understood, according to our correspondent's letter, "that Buonaparte had been purposely suffered to land his men at Alexandria, in order that the Porte should be roused to a sense of indignation against France; that admiral Nelson had therefore retired from Alexandria, when he discovered that he had anticipated the French fleet, but that having returned in a short time, he found that fleet so fortunately disposed that he attacked it with the happiest success, capturing three and burning four ships of the line."

Should Buonaparte reach Suez, and we are much inclined to think it will accomplish that object, our chief chance for defeating his further progress towards India, rests upon the event of Commodore Blanket reaching the Straits of Babelmandel, at the mouth of the Red Sea, in time to prevent his getting out. These Straits are only about 12 miles wide, and may be kept possession of by a very small force.

The messenger that brought the dispatches from Constantinople brought also an overland express from Hindostan. We are happy to learn that it conveys intelligence of general and perfect tranquility prevailing in that quarter.—Tippoo Saib was apparently inactive. Zemaun Shaw was busied in hostile preparations; but the situation of his domestic affairs, it was supposed would deter him from his threatened invasion of Hindostan. The letters and newspapers from Calcutta to the 15th of March, are all singularly barren of intelligence. The Commander in chief reviewing the Futty Ghur and other encampments on his return to Calcutta.

Hakeem Camger Khan wrote the following letter to Jaggonnauth Row:—"Sir John Shore, with other Sirdats, is on his way from Calcutta, to visit the Nabob Vizier, at Lucknow. Colonel Palmer is also going from thence to Lucknow, and has desired me (Hakeem Camger Khan) to attend him; he also desired me to require of you the strength of your army, and the number of your artillery; and to enquire at what place you had appointed to encounter the forces of the Khan; all which you will be good enough to instruct me upon."—Jaggonnauth Row thereupon directed his Moonshee to draw out a report of the strength of his army and artillery, which was accordingly done as follows:—20,000 horse complete for battle—30 battalions of infantry—a battering train, consisting of 20 pieces of cannon, of a large calibre—and a field train of 130 pieces of cannon. The place appointed to contend with the Shah is the neighbourhood of Gungopour.

VIENNA, September 1.

We learn from Constantinople of the 20th Aug. that Buonaparte's landing at Alexandria has highly irritated the Divan and the whole Turkish nation. He attempted to gain possession of Rosetta in order to go from thence to Cairo, but was resisted so firmly, that he was obliged to retreat and entrench himself in his camp. Long preparation has been made here to frustrate his views. The only magazines that are formed for his army, were made here-and-there, by some Turkish Jews, with the intention of selling them to the French on their arrival, and these Jews have been taken up and punished. The captain Pacha will, it is said, march against Buonaparte.

NEW-BRUNSWICK, Nov. 13.

We are informed that some young ladies of this city to the number of fifteen have afforded a handsome specimen of their benevolence and generosity, in taking as many female children under their patronage, who are either orphans or whose parents are poor and unable to provide for their education—The children are sent to the same school, are provided with clothing to make them appear decent at church, and their tuition paid for by the young ladies.—Quere—would it not be a handsome thing, if as many young gentlemen would imitate the generosity of the ladies, and select from the walks of poverty, from the house of the widow and orphan, as many male children as would match the former, and send them to a man of good character whose pleasing task it is "to rear the tender thought and teach the young idea how to shoot."

N. B. It is said that some of the young gentlemen have likewise exhibited proofs of their generosity in the same way.

RUTLAND, Nov 5.

Warrants are issued by the Governor for the election of a representative to Congress for this district on the first Tuesday of December next. The patriotic freemen are desired to remember that the contest is now become a matter of the highest importance. It is not a dispute in favor of any particular individual, but it respects the existence and support of our constitution and government. Whether the American or the French interest shall prevail, and which of them the freemen of this district will support, is the question to be decided at the next election. Is it to be supposed that any friend to his country will hesitate about giving his vote in favor of one of the federal candidates? of these Samuel Williams, esq. stands the highest on the list.

NEW-YORK, Nov. 14.

The ship Adventure, Captain Berry, which arrived here yesterday, sailed from Greenock on the 27th Sept.

We have received Glasgow papers to the 25th of the same month, and London papers to the 21st. The most important article in the Glasgow papers is that respecting the engagement between the Mediterranean fleets.

Capt. Bland, of the English sloop L'Espoir, of 14 guns, on the 7th Sept. after an obstinate action, in the Mediterranean, captured the Genoese frigate Liguria, of 42 guns! We shall publish the official letter of this truly gallant action.

Ireland was in a great degree of tranquility.

The 3 per cent. consols were up to 56 3-4

The ship John arrived at Greenock in 34 days from Charleston.

GLASGOW, September 25.

Paris papers till 17th inst. have been received since our last. By these it appears, that admiral Nelson has, by the total destruction of the French fleet, on its return from Alexdria, made ample amends for his former ill luck. "The squadron of admiral Brueys," says the Suppliment to the Redacteur of the 14th inst. "which was moored off Beguieres, was attacked by the British fleet; on both sides the action was maintained with a degree of obstinacy which history doe not afford an example. During the action the vessel of the French admiral blew up. Two or three of our ships were sunk. Others, both British and French, were driven on shore; others of the French vessels remained totally disabled on the scene of action. We are anxious for their fate." The authenticity of this intelligence, which was repeated in the Paris papers of the 15th and 16th has been doubted by many, because it had first appeared only in the Supplement of the Redacteur; but when we consider that the Supplement also contains a message from the directory to the council of Five Hundred, on the subject of Buonaparte's entrance into Egypt, which is certainly official; and that it has been the policy of the French government, from the days of Barrere to the present, to communicate the bad news which they could not conceal, under the covert of some intelligence more consoling; these reluctant confessions of the directory seem sufficient, in our opinion, to justify our yielding almost implicit credit to the report.

The message to the directory on the subject of Buonaparte's entrance into Egypt, a copy of which will be found under the French department, is a sort of manifesto, in which the directory unblushingly make the wrongs of the Arabs of forty years endurance, the pretence for an aggression obviously founded in inordinate ambition and a spirit of aggrandizement.

There is now no doubt that Buonaparte reached Cairo on the 22d July. It would appear, therefore, that the opposition he met with on the way thither for Alexandria, if he met with any, was extremely impotent. It is also probable, that the ultimate object of his expedition is India, with a view to destroy the power and interest of Great Britain in that quarter, to the attainment of which the possession of Egypt is a necessary appendage.

These papers also contain a letter from Savary and from general Humbert to the minister of marine, on the landing of the French in Ireland. Sanguine as it would thence appear were the hopes of Humbert, they have, happily for this country, been completely frustrated. Two, some say ten, sail of the line and seven frigates, under the command of admiral de Galles, have, it is said, sailed from Brest for Ireland.

The report brought by the master of a vessel arrived in the Clyde from Newry, of the landing of some more Frenchmen in Ireland, noticed in our last, has since been confirmed by the Irish papers. Napper Tandy, the expatriated patriot, was, it seems, their leader, and issued two addresses to the United Irishmen, which will be found under the Irish department. The vessel in which they had re-embarked for France it is said, has been captured.

LONDON, September 19.

A mail arrived from Dublin this morning, which brought letters and papers to the 15th instant. Their contents are uninteresting.

The admiralty have received an account of sir Horatio Nelson having sailed from Syracuse on the 26th of July.

Extract of a letter from captain B. Berry, of his majesty's ship Vanguard.

"Vanguard, at sea, off Candia, July 9, 1798.

"We left the Rocks of Gibraltar on the 9th of May, and arrived off Toulon on the 17th; on the 20th took a brig from Smyrna; on the same night a most tremendous storm arose, in which we carried away all our topmasts, and late our foremast, which rendered us a complete wreck; on the 23d we arrived at Sardinia, and refitted, and went to sea again in 4 days; on the 7th June were joined by ten sail of the line and a 50 gun ship; on the 17th we looked into Naples Bay, and communicated with sir W. Hamilton; in 6 days from Sicily we arrived at Alexandria; they had heard the French were coming, and were determined to repel them. The governor was determined should they land, to begin by cutting off the head of their consul, and all that were in the French interest, and said he would serve us the same if we attempted to land any force; he said this to the officer we sent on shore. We are now going into Syracuse to wood and water, &c. &c.

"Admiral Nelson and the fleet are all in good health."

On Tuesday arrived at Yarmouth, his majesty's ships the Kent, of 74 guns, admiral lord viscount Duncan, captain Hope; Ganges, of 74 guns, commodore M'Dowall; Belliqueux, of 64 guns, capt. England; Monmouth, of 64 guns, captain Deans; Director, of 64 guns, captain Bligh; Veteran of 64 guns, captain Moss; America, of 64 guns, captain Smith; and the Glatton, of 54 guns, captain Cobb, from a cruize off the Texel.

The Princess of Wales, a new second rate of 98 guns, is to be laid down in the king's dockyard at Chatham on the same slip from whence the Temeraire of the same rate was launched on Tuesday se'nnight.

The most marked and studied civilities continue to pass between the Spanish admiral and lord St Vincent. The letter from captain Manly Dixon, giving an account of his action with the Spanish frigates, and his capture of La Dorothee, came through Spain, and was sent off by admiral Messarado, by a flag of truce, to the British admiral. This is being civil indeed!

By the exchange of prisoners about to be carried into effect, this country will get back about four thousand.

September 20.

The letters received by lady Nelson from Sir Horatio, were dated on the 20th July from Syracuse. As might naturally be expected, the gallant admiral expresses the deepest regret at not having been able to fall in with the French fleet. He holds a confident hope, however, that he may yet have an opportunity of grappling with l'Orient, the French Admiral's ship.

The price of Drugs and Medicines imported from the Levant, &c. have lately had a very considerable rise of not less than 100 per cent. on many of the articles, in particular camphire, opium, rhubarb and cochineal.

COPY

Of a letter from captain Dixon, of his Majesty's ship the Lion, to admiral the earl of St. Vincent, dated at Sea, the 17th July, 1798.

MY LORD,

It is with the greatest pleasure I have the honor to inform your lordship, that yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, Carthagena bearing N. 79. W. distant 19 leagues, I had the good fortune to fall in with a squadron of Spanish frigates, as per margin*, and that after having brought them to close action, about a quarter past eleven o'clock, which lasted with great warmth till ten minutes past one, P. M. the enemy was totally defeated and put to flight, leaving the Dorothea to her fate, having hoisted an English ensign with the Union downwards; and as I considered her in the greatest distress, I lost not a moment in taking possession which was done in the face of the three remaining frigates, distant about two miles on my weather bow.

In detailing the particulars of the above affair, I have to inform your lordship, that at the moment the frigates were descried in the S. E. quarter, the Lion was steering East with a crowd of sail, the wind moderate at W. S. W. and as I soon discovered by their signals and other manœuvres they were enemies, I immediately cleared ship for action, which being effected in the shortest time I ever recollect to have seen, I acquainted the officers and ship's company with my intention of immediately bringing the frigates to the closest action possible; and observing the cheerfulness with which it was received, I determined not to lose a moment to profit thereby, and accordingly took in studding sails and first reefs of the topsails, in order to secure the fighting of the lower battery, and hauled up towards the frigates which were steering for the Lion. Having secured the weather gauge, I bore down on the enemy, who was forming in a close order of battle on the larboard side of bearing: the third frigate from the van had lost her fore-top mast. It immediately occurred to me that the crippled ship was my object, in order to secure a general action; supposing that a Spaniard (from the nobleness of his character) would never with so superior a force forsake a friend in distress. In this I fortunately succeeded; and steering for and closing with the crippled ship, which was now become the sternmost in the line of battle the other three frigates tacked in succession, and passed the Lion very gallantly within musket shot; but as their line after tacking was by no means a close one, they each received a well directed broadside from the Lion; the good effect of which was very visible by their standing a considerable time on that tack. I still continued to steer for the crippled ship, who nearly sailing as well as the Lion, galled her very considerably in the rigging by her stern chases.

The three frigates made a second close attempt, but not so close as the former, to support her, and were each fully repaid by an exchange of broadsides. At length we closed with the crippled ship, and poured in a destructive fire, the yard arms being just clear of each other; he nevertheless did not strike for some time after. At this period I found the Lion totally ungovernable, having all her braces, bowlings, clue garnets, &c. shot away, the foresail nearly rendered useless, and the other sails much torn.

The three frigates a third time made a distant and feeble effort to protect and cover the distressed frigate, but in vain; they did not dare to approach within the distance to do so, and by great exertions being enabled to wear round on the same tack with the frigate that had now struck her colours, and substituted the English Ensign in its place, I closed with and took possession of her as before related.

During the remainder of the day we were lying to, fully employed in repairing the rigging, bending new canvas, and securing the prize, in order to enable me, if possible, to go in pursuit of the three frigates, which were making off close by the Wind to the N. W.

Now, my Lord, it is with the greatest and most heartfelt pleasure to me that this service has been effected with the probable loss of only one poor man, who has had his thigh amputated, as likewise Mr. Patey, midshipman, slightly wounded in the shoulder; this youth did not quit his quarters in consequence of the wound, and was from first to last, particularly active: But, my Lord, there have been several miraculous recoveries in the Lion, owing to the great ability and humane attention of the Surgeon, Mr. Young, I therefore never despair of a man while there is life.

I have now the satisfaction of declaring to your Lordships, that nothing could exceed the cool and collected bravery and determined resolution of every individual in the Lion. I have the Dorothea in tow, as she has her mizen-mast and fore-top-mast carried away, and sails and rigging cut to pieces, her rudder and main-mast much damaged, as well as on the account of the necessary attendance of the Surgeon to the relief of the wounded men on board, the Surgeon of the Dorothea being an inexperienced man, and without the necessary instruments.

I can get, my Lord, but an imperfect account of the killed on board the Dorothea; their complement at the commencement of the action was called three hundred and fifty, and now there are victualled on board the Lion three hundred and fifty one; many volunteers embarked on board at Carthagena; the Captain and Officers suppose there might be from twenty to forty killed in the action, and wounded now on board the Lion are thirty-two.

I am &c. &c.
MANLEY DIXON.

Cassida, of 42 guns and 350 men, Don Deam Farrara, Captain. Proserpine, of 42 guns and 350 men, Quaj. Bial, Captain.

They all sailed from Carthagena the 8th inst. on a Cruize.

September 22.

Orders are sent to Scotland for a supply of a large quantity of cannon, of very large calibre by consent of government, for America.

We understand that the French, previous to their surrender at Ballynamuck, turned upon the rebels and killed about 500 of them.

PLYMOUTH-DOCK, Sep. 20.

An express arrived at one o'clock this morning, to vice-admiral sir Alan Garner, with information of two sail of the line and nine frigates, with four thousand troops on board, having sailed from Brest supposed for Ireland: If it should prove so, we may soon expect to hear a good account of them, as the Ramilies, Triumph, Saturn of 74 guns each, the Repulse and Polyhemus of 64 guns each and a number of frigates are cruising off that coast.

A fleet is in sight to the eastward, supposed to be lord Bridport out of Torbay. Wind at N.

DUBLIN, Sept. 15.

The French officers who have been taken prisoners, acknowledge themselves much disappointed in their enterprize in this country, and severely exclaim against the rebels, who joined them, whom they declare to be the greatest ruffians and savages on the face of the earth, and many of whom they shot for robbing and deceiving them. It appears that they cloathed about two thousand of the insurgents with a green uniform and gave them fire arms, numbers of whom ran away thus accoutred.

The French commander in chief appointed a provisional municipality in Castlebar, which was composed of the following persons:

"Citizen C. Baynes, mayor; citizens Michael Sheridan, John Huston, Bœtius Egan, P. P (parish priest) James Hiethcock, Redmond Lyons, Andrew Edmonston, James Gibbons, James Clark, and John Burke, municipal officers."

An action has taken place at Castlebar, between the yeomanry and a band of rebels who attacked the town; the latter was cut to pieces.

From the London STAR, of September 1.

On Saturday we laid before our readers the accounts brought by the Hamburgh mail, of a defeat said to have been experienced by Buonaparte near Cairo. We have now to state intelligence of a very different nature, which was received in the course of that day at the India House, and which we think much better entitled to credit.

Mr. Tooke, the Company's resident at Constantinople, in a letter to the directors, dated the 10th ult. which was forwarded by a special messenger, informs them that Buonaparte had not only made himself master of Alexandria, but of Rosetta, Damietta and Grand Cairo, tho not without considerable loss, having been harrassed by the Arabs and Mamelucks, whom, however he had dispersed with great slaughter. The intelligence is given Mr. Tooke on the authority of letters from Aleppo, dated the 28th of July.

It is extremely probable that the substance of this intelligence is true, though there are difficulties to its receiving full credit. Rosetta is only between 40 and 50 miles distant from Alexandria which he might reach in a little time, without very great labor; but from thence to Damietta he could not possibly march at the season; for the Nile begins to overflow its banks about the end of May, and all the low lands continue inundated till the 10th or 20th of August—sometimes even to the end of September. Through such a country no army could march a distance of about 100 miles, even if we suppose the waters to have subsided earlier than usual; for the ground always continues soft and muddy for some time after.

To Cairo the the French might proceed direct from Rosetta without such an impediment, but the distance is about 150 miles, and could not but expose them to considerable danger, if by any means the enervated and enslaved inhabitants may have been roused into action; which may possibly have been the case if the Firman said to have been issued by the Porte, addressed to the Bashaws and Beys of Egypt, and which was brought over by the Hamburgh mail, may be considered as genuine. It directs them to throw every possible obstruction in the way of the infidels, who were invading the country with a view of overturning its religion, and endeavours to rouse them to adopt the most vigorous measures, so that the enemy may not be permitted to carry even a grain of sand out of the Sultan's dominions.

But it is possible Buonaparte may have gone from Rosetta to Damietta by sea, having previously ordered his fleet from Alexandria to the former, while he proceeded there by land: or having left a sufficient garrison in Alexandria, he may have even gone to Rosetta by sea—taken and garrisoned it, and then again embarked for Damietta. This appears the wisest and most rational plan that could be followed; for admiral Nelson having left Buonaparte complete master of the eastern extremity of the Mediterranean, there was nothing to oppose his progress by sea. Being once arrived at Damietta, he could go up the large eastern branch of the Nile to Cairo, in boats, the common passage being only about six or seven days.

In which ever way we suppose him to have reached Cairo, his progress must have been rapid indeed; for he reached Alexandria on the 7th or 8th of July, and the accounts of his arrival at Cairo are stated to have arrived at Aleppo on or before the 28th of the same month; that is within 20 days, though so much was to be done in the time, and the news to travel upwards of 270 leagues.

PHILADELPHIA,

THURSDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 15.

We are favored with the following extract of a letter from Samuel Williams, esq. Agent for American claims, to Samuel Bayard, dated,

"LONDON, July 28, 1798.

"Since your departure, the Lords have done business as they ought to have done it long before. They have restored, in about sixty six cases, ordered further proof in twenty, and affirmed the condemnation of fourteen. Their present session will end next week—to meet again in November. Forty cases are set down for that term."

The accounts from Mr. SEDGWICK's district leave little doubt of his election to the next Congress.

Major JOSEPH EGGLESTON of Amelia county, (Vir.) succeeds William B. Giles, Esq. who has resigned his seat in the ensuing Congress. He was elected by a majority of more than two to one over Alexander Jones, Esq. He is an anti.

The keel of the Merchants' frigate was laid last week, on the slip whence the United States was launched, and the workmen begin to raise the ribs on Saturday next.

From indubitable authority we learn, and have to announce to the public, that during the two cruises which the frigate United States has made, one through the West-India islands at an unhealthy season of the year, with a crew consisting of near 400 men, not a man has died by disease; and the crew, at present, enjoy very good health. This does great credit to the medical department on board.

DOCTOR LOGAN,

Of whom it is impossible to say whether his stupidity or his impudence preponderates, yesterday had the unpardonable effrontery to wait upon General Washington. Upon his introduction he offered his polluted hand to the General, who declined returning his fraternal salutation. The following dialogue then passed.

Logan.—I have the honor to bear from Paris, the respects of your old friend, La Fayette.

Gen.—Aye!

Logan.—I have the honor, also, to bear the compliments of Gen. Kosciusko.

Gen.—Aye!

Logan.—I have the honor, also, to bear the compliments of Gen. ——— (his name not now remembered.)

Gen.—Aye!

After a pause of confusion, the Cats paw of Mammoth, (mentioning the possible danger of residing in this city, from the late prevalence of a contagious disorder) then offered the General a residence at Stenton, the theatre of his frequent interviews with Jefferson. The General, in a mingled tone of indignation and contempt, replied, that he was under no apprehension of danger;—and the impertinent intruder departed.

The following directions for altering fire places upon count Rumford's plan, may be of use to those who have not seen his publication, and are desirous of saving fuel, and making their apartments comfortable.

The front of the fire place must be 39 inches wide.

The back do. 13 do. and carried up perpendicular 42 inches or 6 do. above the bottom of the mantle.

The depth do. 13 do.

The height do. 36 do.

The throat of the chimney 4 do.

The mantle or breast-work ought to be 9 inches thick at the throat, if it cannot conveniently be made so, the back must be carried up 18 inches, and then gradually bro't forward until the throat of the chimney is reduced to 4 inches above; the back must be flat on the top, an opening to be closed with a stone or some loose brick may be left of a sufficient size for a sweep-chimney to enter. Phil. Gaz.

From Porcupine's Gazette.

MR. COBBET,

As your ingenious correspondents have not agreed concerning the close of the present "enlightened" century, if you think my ideas respecting it worthy of a place in your paper, you will oblige me by inserting them.

I am of opinion, that at twelve o'clock in the night succeeding the present day (Nov. 13' 1798 years 10 months and 13 days of the christian æra will then have elapsed, and that on the 31st of December next, at midnight, which will complete that day, 1799 years will then have elapsed; consequently, on the 31st of December, 1799, at midnight, 1800 years will then have passed, and the next moment afterwards which will be the first minute of the first day of January, 1800, will also be the first minute of the nineteenth century.

If this be not the case, instead of dating the present year, 1798, we should call it the 1798th year of our Lord; and then, the 31st of December next, will complete 1798 years, and the 31st of December 1800 complete the 18th Century—for example, I am 18 years and some months old. If I am asked my age, I either reply. I am 18 years old, or, I am in the 19th year of my age; eighty years hence, if I live so long, I shall be 98 years old, and in the 99th year of my age—one year afterwards I shall be 99 years old, and in my hundreth year, consequently the close of the year in which I I date 99 will be the close of my first century, and if I should live 1700 years longer, the wiseacres of those days will perhaps puzzle their brains to determine what year closes the 18th Century of the life of your humble servant,

S.

P. S. It is asked, to what year did the first twelve months of the Christian era belong? I will answer that question by another,—To what hour do the first 60 minutes afternoon belong?

From a Dublin Paper.

CORK ASSIZES.

On the 5th instant, Thomas Maker, of the city of Cork, an opulent shopkeeper and publican, was tried before Mr Serjeant Stanley, for endeavoring to seduce one Thomas Boyle, a soldier in the North Mayo regiment of militia, from his duty and allegiance, by advising him to join the society of United Irishmen, and by administering an oath to Boyle, never to draw a trigger or ramrod against the French, or against the United Irishmen. It appeared that the prisoner had long been in the habit of seducing and corrupting the army, and frequently invited soldiers to his house for that purpose. Boyle at first refused to be sworn, and acquainted colonel Jackson and the officers of the attempts made on him by the prisoner; they advised the soldier to go to the prisoner, and take any oath.

As soon as the soldier had taken the oath, he informed his officers of it, and the prisoner was apprehended, and after a long trial, convicted upon the clearest evidence. In the course of the trial, it appeared that he solicited the soldiers to join in murdering the colonel and the other officers of the regiment, on their return from dinner at sir James Stewart's.

The prisoner received sentence of death, and was ordered for execution on Saturday.

Jeremiah Fehane and James Fehane were capitally convicted, and received sentence of death, for joining a party of United Irishmen, and attacking the house of Wm. Morris, esq. their landlord, and firing a blunderbuss at him, by which he was severely wounded.

Benjamin Brenan, Wm. Garde, Michael Garde, John Boland and Wm. Kearney, were capitally convicted of conspiracies to murder, and were executed pursuant to their sentence,

Sixty Dollars Reward.
MADE their escape from the Gaol in the borough of Lancaster, on Saturday evening last, between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock, two French prisoners, part of the crew of La Croyable.
The one named Etienne Austin, a native of Bordeaux in France, 26 years of age, about 5 feet 6 inches high, dark eyes and complexion, by trade a carpenter, supposed to be unacquainted with the English or German language. Had on when he went away, a white hat, pantaloons, and short jacket, tight made, and probably took with him some other clothes.
The other named Peter Dupriew, a native of Bujoin in France, 20 years of age, about 5 feet 8 inches high, grey eyes, dark complexion, a seaman by occupation, a dirty ill-looking fellow. Had on when he went away, a blue sailor's jacket, with large tow trowsers, an old wool hat, speaks imperfect German.
Also, made his escape the same day, about nine o'clock in the morning, from the same gaol, a negro man named Peter Huston, about 5 feet 4 inches high, of a smiling countenance, lately convicted of a felony in this county. Had on when he went away, a long blue coat, a pair of white trowsers, both ragged, and a black hat.
Twenty-five dollars will be paid for apprehending and securing in any goal, each or either of the above named Frenchmen, and Ten dollars for the negro, by Christian Carpenter, jun. Sheriff.

Forty Dollars Reward
FOR APPREHENDING
A GENTLEMAN NEGRO,
BY name GEORGE or GEORGE PARKER, the property of the subscriber, who has thought proper on the night of the 21st inst. to elope from his master without any provocation or just cause; he was formerly the property of Beckwith Butler, esq. and lived a considerable time with —— Pottenger, who kept tavern in Fredericksburg, having seen much company and travelled with several gentlemen through different parts of this state, he is much known. It is therefore conjectured he will push for some of the northern cities or towns as he has discovered an aversion to plantation work, though he may perhaps have crossed the ridge where he has a brother belonging to major Butler.
This fellow is about five feet seven inches high, well proportioned and walks active and brisk, his countenance is open and agreeable enough when in good humour; he can hardly be surpast in shrewdness, and is a very capable waiting-man, house servant, barber, &c. To describe his dress would be useless, as he possessed a variety of clothes, though when dressed lately, he wore a green coat bound with white ferreting and spotted jacket and breeches. Whoever brings him home or secures in goal in this or any other state, the said slave, so that I may get him again, shall have the above reward. ALEXANDER VASS.
Fa'mouth. Oct. 23, 1798.
N. B.—Masters of vessels and Stage Drivers are requested to beware of harbering said fellow to impose on them by assisting his escape. A. V.
